About

Isak is a designer and brand manager who works at the intersection of design, commerce and manufacturing. He holds a Bachelor of Design Computing and Advanced Studies in Marketing from the University of Sydney, with international experience from an exchange at Tecnológico de Monterrey in Mexico. He now leads brand and e-commerce at Advance Chemicals, a family-owned Australian manufacturer, where he is responsible for the Euca brand across retail and digital channels and is the designated successor to the business. Alongside this he has co-founded two ventures, OddProd and Chronic, and has volunteered weekly with the Salvation Army for over three years. Isak is drawn to AIYEP for the chance to work inside an unfamiliar business culture, build lasting ties with Indonesian peers, and bring what he learns back to Australian manufacturing.

Projects

Microsoft and the University of Sydney: Launching Graduates into the Workforce i Age of AI (Cogniti-m)

Presented at Microsoft in North Sydney

Grade: 85

Date: January 2025- June 2025

Isak was the team leader of an interdisciplinary team of six producing actionable insights for project partners Microsoft and the University of Sydney, investigating the impact of AI on students' cognitive skills and education. He coordinated the team's work and its pitch of the working prototype, Cogniti-m, delivered at Microsoft in North Sydney. Cogniti-m is a personalised collaborative AI agent that operates inside Canvas group conversations, able to interact with and support every member of a group. The implementation plan begins with final-year group project units, with scope to expand from there, preparing students to build the collaborative and AI skills an AI-integrated workforce will demand.

T-Pesos (A collaboration with Tecnológico de Monterrey)

Exchange Project

Grade: 95

Date: June 2023 - August 2023

Isak helped conceptualise and prototype T-Pesos, a mobile payments system designed to draw informal economic activity into the formal economy. Roughly 60% of Mexico's economy operates informally, with over a trillion dollars in unrecorded expenditure, and the team took inspiration from M-Pesa, the mobile payment platform that addressed the same problem across parts of Africa. Designed with digital duality in mind, T-Pesos aimed to encourage cellular payments and improve financial inclusion and transparency. Isak was the only Australian on the exchange and worked in a team with German, French and Salvadoran students, designing for a market none of them came from. The project graded 95 and taught him to check his assumptions against people who see the same problem differently.
